Western Union Conspicuously Weak Through Prospective Bonding. London Strengthens With Reports of Relief to Ladysmith-Foreign Houses Were Fairly Good Buyers.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—Yesterday's reactionary tendevey was continued in the Stock Market this worning in the early dealings. The declines were to few instances not severe, but the trading was altogether wanting in snap and animation. Western Union was the conspicuously weak feature of the market, the selling in that instance reflect-ing the disquietude existing by the announce-ment of the issue of the $20,000,000 of bonds. There was a virtual absence of news over night bearing upon the market.

The London Stock Market was reported strong notwithstanding the consols on persistent reports that General Buller had succeeded in raising the siege of Ladysmith. Foreign houses were fair buyers of stocks in the local market. Notwith-standing the small volume of business, nterest was fairly well distributed, no particular quarter of the market receiving an undue amount of at-

The bears continued their attack on the market this morning, and they were able to depress prices again during the first part of the day, although the downward movement was not important in extent. London advanced the prices of the Americans a trifle, and this fact, with supporting orders on this side, probably prevented the bears from obtaining a temporary victory. The obtaining a temporary victory. The immediate outcome was uncertain, though careful market people looked for a recovery before the end of the week and for a better market next week. The entire situation favors higher prices. The outlook for the bank statement tomorrow is that it will be a good one, though not up to the high standard set in recent weeks. Anacostia Residents Complain.

Several of the residents of Anacostia.

Several of the residents of Anacostia have written to the Commissioners com-plaining that the widening of the street railway tracks on Monroe Street would cut off a great deal of the driveway and cut off a great deal of the driveway and asking the Commissioners to remedy the tomo evil. The Commissioners, in reply, state that the tracks are to be widened to accommodate the usual build of car. The cars heretofore run on this street were very small, the Commissioners state, and it is necessary to widen the tracks to allow the larger cars to pass safely along the thoroughfore. They are, however, willing to hear any objections against the project, with a view to modifying the plan if necessary.

THE MOLINEUX TRIAL

Assistant District Attorney Osborne Summing Up the Evidence. NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—The trial of Roland B. Molineux was continued this morning before Recorder Goff, with Assistand District Attorney Osborne still summing up for the people and asking for the defendant's conviction. Juror Manheim Brown, whose sudden illness yesterday prevented an afternoon session of the court, from his rheunatism and limped painfully when ae entered the court room, but he told the recorder that he hoped to be able to get through with the trial without further delay.

Mr. Osborne took up his argument for the peoply where he left off yesterday. He had been talking for a long time without making reference to his opponent's resource to questions, but he work of his way back to it and an interesting skirmish between him and Mr. Battle ensued. Dwellitz still upon Mr. Weeks' action. mish between him and Mr. Battle ensued. Dwelling still upon Mr. Weeks' action in restring his case without difficulty, he asked why Mr. Weeks spent his time in making objections "that would stretch from Maine to Texas" without once moving before the court that the case be given to the consideration of the jury for the acquittal of the defendant.

"That motion was made in the Buchanan case, it was made in the Carlyle-Harris case, it has been made in thousands of cases," said Mr. Osborne.

"We object," interrupted Mr. Battle, but the prosecuting attorney kept on talking. Mr. Battle persisted until he caught the recorder's attention.

"The gentleman is referring to other cases and I would call the court's attention to the fact that our reference to the evidence in the case was not allowed. that our reference to the evidence in this case was not allowed."

case was not allowed."

Recorder Goff overruled the objection, and Mr. Osborne, turning, said suavely: "If my remarks hurt the defendant I will stop." Mr. Osborne, however, kept on the same subject. He eulogized the ability of the counsel for the defence, and spoke of his disappointed hope that "Mr. Weeks, one of the greatest criminal lawyers in the country, would, like Moses of old, smite the rock in the desert, so that the water of living truth would rush out and wash away all suspicion from his client. I wished for that miracle when I looked on that grim old warrior, and you looked for that grim old warrior, and you looked for it, but the miracle did not come."

Mr. Osborne then took up the contention of the defense.

of the defence over Cornish's assertion that he had cut the address of the poison that he had cut the address of the poison package with scissors.

"What difference does it make," stormed he, "whether it was cut out by scissors or a buzz-saw or an ax, or whether he tore it out? Mr. Weeks did not bring out that the exhibit had been handled by Dr. Hitchcock, Captain McClusky, and others in this court and out of it. Did Mr. Weeks tell you whether the scissors were dull or sharp, loose-jointed, or as ragged as a saw? When Cornish swears before you saw? When Cornish swears before you that the address was cut out with scissors and you see that its edges are rough, does not that signify that Cornish is no smooth witness and does not testify to

"This talk about the scissors is utterly trivial when it has been established in this court by two reliable witnesses who had no motive, that Cornish had received the package as he testified.

derer from death if some maiden would choose him for her husband.

This, too, seems to have been some what the custom among the Indians, and the negroes of African, unless many a well-known captive has falsely introduced this incident to cast a glamour of romance about himself. Sienkiewicz has brought this law into his latest novel, and thus saves his hero from death on the gallows. It is rather remarkable, considering how many travelers have availed themselves of the Incident, that more romancers should not have employed it. Sienkiewicz shows us how effective it may be when naught but death seems left to the hero.

WOUNDED TWENTY-SIX TIMES. An Ohio Soldier Struck by Many Bullets in One Fight.

An Ohio soldier seems to hold the record for being wounded more times at once than any other man who lived through it. The remarkable part of it is that he received night under the auspices of the National all the wounds in a single battle and all but one of them at the same instant.
